

India pushes world to be one mkt for lateral hiring

Arvind.Chauhan
@timesgroup.com

Lucknow: With 80 crore internet users and demographic dividend, India attempted to push the world to become one market for lateral hiring at G20's digital economy working group (DEWG) conference which culminated on Wednesday. After the delegates unanimously agreed over the need for digital public infrastructure and digital skilling, Indian representatives went further and mooted an idea to create a framework for mutual recognition of digital skills and centre of excellence, an online platform for mapping the skills of different countries, so that organizations can source out manpower as per their requirement.

Delegates who participated in DEWG were thrilled and lauded Lucknow as well the state for the hospitality, rich culture, food and smiling nature Additional secretary, ministry of electronics and information technology (MeitY), Bhuvnesh Kumar said, "In each country, there should be a framework which could help everyone understand that an individual with a particular qualification or a particular course in a country is equivalent to qualification of a candidate or course in another country.

► Lauded Lucknow, P 3