

CM Yogi's Big Boost to Infrastructure in Bundelkhand.

5,000 hectares allotted for building Noida-like industrial cities

Budelkhand news: Uttar Pradesh The Bundelkhand Industrial Development Authority (BIDA), being created for the Bundelkhand region, will develop industrial and commercial cities matching the likes of Noida and Greater Noida. The development project for building these cities will span an area of 5,000 hectares.

Written by: ET Now Digital | Updated Jul 21, 2023 | 08:31 AM IST

CM Yogi Adityanath had spoke about the creation of Bundelkhand Industrial Development Authority earlier (Pic: Yogi Adityanath's Twitter/TIMES NOW DIGITAL)

Budelkhand news: Uttar Pradesh The Bundelkhand Industrial Development Authority (BIDA), being created for the Bundelkhand region, will develop industrial and commercial cities matching the likes of Noida and Greater Noida, the government of Uttar Pradesh announced in a tweet.

First phase to begin in Jhansi

According to a report by Live Hindustan, the development project for building these cities will span an area of 5,000 hectares. The first phase of the project, spanning 1,000 acres of land, will begin from Jhansi, with some parts of other districts gradually coming under the jurisdiction of the newly-formed authority later on.

UP Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath had made the announcement regarding the creation of an industrial development authority a while back. In line with that, the state administration is currently planning on developing an industrial, commercial, and residential township on par with those seen in Noida and Greater Noida. The move, the Live Hindustan report said, would encourage industrial units from other regions to come and set up shop in Bundelkhand.

BIDA to be created soon

The Department of Industrial Development has prepared the outline for the formation of BIDA. The proposal is expected to be passed in a cabinet meeting soon.

Industries beyond defence

The Bundelkhand region is already expected to see defence manufacturing units being set up under the Uttar Pradesh Defence Industrial Corridor (UPDIC). Land apart from this will be allotted to

CM Yogi Adityanath had spoke about the creation of Bundelkhand Industrial Development Authority earlier (Pic: Yogi Adityanath's Twitter/TIMES NOW DIGITAL)

Budelkhand news: Uttar Pradesh The Bundelkhand Industrial Development Authority (BIDA), being created for the Bundelkhand region, will develop industrial and commercial cities matching the likes of Noida and Greater Noida, the government of Uttar Pradesh announced in a tweet.

First phase to begin in Jhansi

According to a report by Live Hindustan, the development project for building these cities will span an area of 5,000 hectares. The first phase of the project, spanning 1,000 acres of land, will begin from Jhansi, with some parts of other districts gradually coming under the jurisdiction of the newly-formed authority later on.

UP Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath had made the announcement regarding the creation of an industrial development authority a while back. In line with that, the state administration is currently planning on developing an industrial, commercial, and residential township on par with those seen in Noida and Greater Noida. The move, the Live Hindustan report said, would encourage industrial units from other regions to come and set up shop in Bundelkhand.

BIDA to be created soon

The Department of Industrial Development has prepared the outline for the formation of BIDA. The proposal is expected to be passed in a cabinet meeting soon.

First phase to begin in Jhansi

According to a report by Live Hindustan, the development project for building these cities will span an area of 5,000 hectares. The first phase of the project, spanning 1,000 acres of land, will begin from Jhansi, with some parts of other districts gradually coming under the jurisdiction of the newly-formed authority later on.

UP Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath had made the announcement regarding the creation of an industrial development authority a while back. In line with that, the state administration is currently planning on developing an industrial, commercial, and residential township on par with those seen in Noida and Greater Noida. The move, the Live Hindustan report said, would encourage industrial units from other regions to come and set up shop in Bundelkhand.

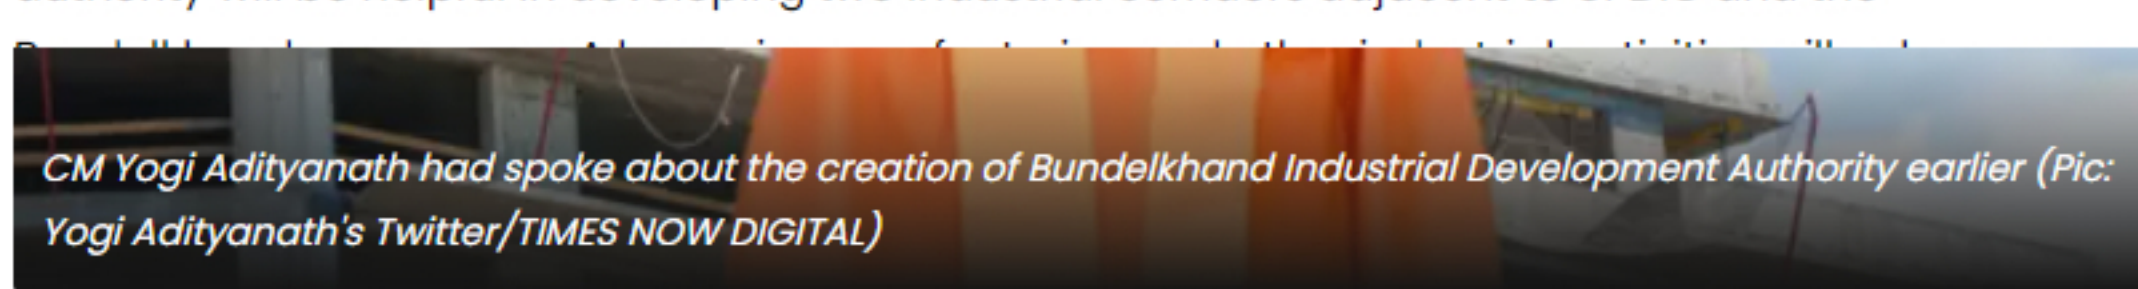

BIDA to be created soon

The Department of Industrial Development has prepared the outline for the formation of BIDA. The proposal is expected to be passed in a cabinet meeting soon.

Industries beyond defence

The Bundelkhand region is already expected to see defence manufacturing units being set up under the Uttar Pradesh Defence Industrial Corridor (UPDIC). Land apart from this will be allotted to other industrial units so as to also bolster the presence of non-defence sector projects in the southern part of the state.

Mayur Maheshwari, an engineer-turned-Indian Administrative Services (IAS) officer said that this authority will be helpful in developing two industrial corridors adjacent to UPDIC and the

CM Yogi Adityanath had spoke about the creation of Bundelkhand Industrial Development Authority earlier (Pic: Yogi Adityanath's Twitter/TIMES NOW DIGITAL)

Budelkhand news: Uttar Pradesh The Bundelkhand Industrial Development Authority (BIDA), being created for the Bundelkhand region, will develop industrial and commercial cities matching the likes of Noida and Greater Noida, the government of Uttar Pradesh announced in a tweet.

First phase to begin in Jhansi

According to a report by Live Hindustan, the development project for building these cities will span an area of 5,000 hectares. The first phase of the project, spanning 1,000 acres of land, will begin from Jhansi, with some parts of other districts gradually coming under the jurisdiction of the newly-formed authority later on.

UP Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath had made the announcement regarding the creation of an industrial development authority a while back. In line with that, the state administration is currently planning on developing an industrial, commercial, and residential township on par with those seen in Noida and Greater Noida. The move, the Live Hindustan report said, would encourage industrial units from other regions to come and set up shop in Bundelkhand.

BIDA to be created soon

The Department of Industrial Development has prepared the outline for the formation of BIDA. The proposal is expected to be passed in a cabinet meeting soon.

Industries beyond defence

under the Uttar Pradesh Defence Industrial Corridor (UPDIC). Land apart from this will be allotted to other industrial units so as to also bolster the presence of non-defence sector projects in the southern part of the state.

Mayur Maheshwari, an engineer-turned-Indian Administrative Services (IAS) officer said that this authority will be helpful in developing two industrial corridors adjacent to UPDIC and the Bundelkhand expressway. A boom in manufacturing and other industrial activities will enhance employment opportunities available in Bundelkhand and contribute to the region's development.