

US entrepreneur: My 30-year-old connect with UP is rewarding

TIMES NEWS NETWORK

Lucknow: Adrian Mutton, co-founder and CEO of Sannam S4, who was part of the US delegation that met chief minister Yogi Adityanath on Tuesday, expressed his happiness at the development in the state over the past five years. Mutton revealed that he had taught English and economics at the Saharanpur Public School in 1992 and 30 years later, “was delighted to back in UP to share his 30-year-old association with the state”.

Saying that the state had witnessed significant changes over the past five years, Mutton added that he had visited Saharanpur recently and was thrilled to learn that it had been designated as a ‘Smart City’. He said: “In 1992, when there was no Google, I submitted numerous applications seeking a job and I received one employment offer for a teacher’s job at Saharanpur Public School. Being a part of UP’s journey for the past 30 years has been rewarding, and we look forward to helping UP become an economy worth USD 1 trillion.”

Co-founder and CEO of Sannam S4 Adrian Mutton, who was part of the US delegation met Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath on Tuesday, told him that on his recent visit to Saharanpur he was glad to see that it had been designated as a ‘Smart City’

Mutton founded his company Sannam S4 along with another person in 2008 in Delhi.

He said that the company “helps clients to achieve expansion goals across India, South and Southeast Asia, and points beyond”.