

Meerut on cusp of great socio-economic change

HT's spotlight on lesser-known NCR towns, their rise to becoming cities in their own right, and the changes that have been brought within

"Meerut was once the most important city in north-west India after Delhi, and was home to a large European population," says Dr Amit Pathak, a radiologist, who is widely considered an expert on the history of western Uttar Pradesh.

Meerut has always had a strong entrepreneurial spirit, has been home to diverse businesses and industries (Manoj Sharma/HT Photo)

"Meerut was once the most important city in north-west India after Delhi, and was home to a large European population," says Dr Amit Pathak, a radiologist, who is widely considered an expert on the history of western Uttar Pradesh.