

NHAI set to develop ₹4,613 cr Agra-Gwalior greenfield expressway

This 88-km long, six-lane expressway aims to improve connectivity between Agra and Gwalior. It will operate on a build operate transfer (Toll) mode. The expressway will also pass through Uttar Pradesh, Rajasthan and Madhya Pradesh.

State-owned NHAI will develop an 88-km long six-lane Agra-Gwalior Greenfield Expressway at a cost of ₹4,613 crore to enhance connectivity between these two tourism hubs, an official statement said on Wednesday. The access-controlled Agra-Gwalior Greenfield Expressway will start from Deori village in Agra and terminate at Susera village in Gwalior.

'The project shall be developed at a total capital cost of ₹4,613 crore on build operate transfer (Toll) mode,' the statement said.

The statement further said that the concession period of the contract is 20 years, including the construction period of 30 months. The authority will provide construction support of ₹820 crore to the Concessionaire during the construction period, which will be linked to the project's progress, it added.

The greenfield access-controlled expressway will traverse through the states of Uttar Pradesh, Rajasthan, and Madhya Pradesh. The statement said it will not only provide high-speed connectivity between Agra and Gwalior but also will help to decongest various cities and industrial areas on the existing Agra-Gwalior Section of NH-44.

The project will also pass through the National Chambal wildlife sanctuary.
